During mankind's 2.5-million-year history our age of modern medicine covered but a brief period, comparable to a blink of an eye. This poses the question,, how did mankind heal itself during all those prior ages, before the age of medicine? Did mankind live without help or hope? Hardly! Evidence suggests that spiritual healing has had a long history and may have in fact shaped mankind into what we are today. Spiritual healing also appears to have been progressive itself, unfolding with a scientific dimension that is naturally open to infinity. Modern medicine itself has had a crude beginning and undergone a long string of progressive development. It stands to reason that both developments, medicine and Spirit, will ultimately merge so that in the end medicine will be Spirit and spiritual.
