Serving Up Some Funny Leftovers Lisa DeMarco

Leftovers, anyone? Serving Up Some Funny Leftovers is the second part of author Lisa DeMarco's first book, Serving Up Some Funny Adult Menu. With the motto, "I would rather be happy than rich," DeMarco says making people laugh "is my calling in life." Her slightly naughty humor is gleaned from the many jokes she hears every day as a waitress in a family-owned diner-style restaurant in Lake County, Florida. Read page after page of the jokes collected by this veteran waitress, who believes that these stories are just too good not to share. Leftovers are the "jokes that didn't get typed in fast enough to be in the first book," says DeMarco, who always wears her signature pink high-tops. This waitress with a large gusto for living and a wonderful sense of humor believes that there is more to digest in life than food! Lisa DeMarco credits her book to her diners. "My customers are my characters. They are the kind souls who share their tales with me and allow me to serve them up for others to enjoy. I am still amazed by some of the punch lines that come from folks nearly double my age. It just proves that a good sense of humor never grows old!" The ever-smiling waitress lives with her husband, Joe, and two daughters, Amanda and Makenzie, in Tavares, Florida. She has more books up her sleeve. Publisher's website:
